that the submitted parts conform to specifications Think of it as the executive summary of your entire PPAP submission

2 Design Record This section documents the parts design including drawings specifications and any relevant engineering changes Example For a plastic injection molded part this would include CAD drawings material specifications like ABS plastic specific grade and tolerances

3 Process Flow Diagram A visual representation of the manufacturing process Example A simple diagram showing the steps from raw material arrival to finished part packaging including critical control points Think of this as a recipe for your part

4 Process Capability Studies Demonstrates your processs ability to consistently produce parts within specified tolerances Example A Control Chart showing measurements of a critical dimension taken over a sample of parts proving the process is stable and capable Usually a Cpk 1.33 is required

5 Material Performance Test Results This is the proof section showing evidence that your parts meet the required specifications Example Results from tensile strength testing dimensional measurements and chemical analysis reports of the material

6 Appearance Approval Report Documents the visual aspects of the part ensuring it meets aesthetic requirements Example Photographs of the part from multiple angles compared to a master sample and approved by the customers quality department

3 HowTo Crafting a Winning PPAP

Creating a comprehensive PPAP is a multistep process that demands meticulous attention to detail

- 1 Understand the Requirements Carefully review the customers specifications and determine precisely what documentation they require
- 2 Gather Data Collect all necessary documentation throughout your manufacturing process This will save time and frustration down the line
- 3 Organize Your Data Use a clear and logical format to present the information This makes it easy for the customer to review and approve
- 4 Review Validate Before submitting thoroughly review everything to ensure accuracy and completeness
- 5 Submit Electronically Most customers will require electronic submissions often through a dedicated portal

Visualizing Your PPAP Submission

Imagine your PPAP submission as a wellorganized file folder Each document within represents a crucial piece of evidence proving your parts quality This folder submitted to your customer showcases your professionalism and commitment to quality

Summary of Key Points

The AIAG PPAP Manual 4th Edition is the industry standard for demonstrating part quality in the automotive industry Obtaining a free copy requires exploring legitimate channels like your customer networking or potentially partial access through AIAG membership Downloading illegal copies is risky Understanding the key sections and requirements of the PPAP is crucial for a successful submission A wellorganized and complete PPAP submission is essential for securing and maintaining customer contracts
